

A. Issues found

The draft is materially aligned with the approved baseline and the approved Complaint & Investigation SOP: it correctly reflects that complaints are logged, evidence may be preserved, reviews are structured, temporary restrictions may be applied during review, and outcomes are controlled rather than handled informally.

The main issue is surface mixing. The file is still a working pack, not a final website layer. It combines homepage copy, FAQ, onboarding, customer complaint flow, checkboxes, tooltips, warnings, content map, operational notes, and rollout guidance in one block. That is useful internally, but too broad for a final public/product copy pack.

A second issue is overexposure of internal mechanics. Phrases like “formal internal process,” “internal affiliate compliance process,” and long lists of possible outcomes are accurate, but some of them feel too internal for premium public-facing copy. The public layer should communicate trust and accountability without sounding procedural or defensive.

A third issue is onboarding heaviness. Three onboarding checkboxes plus multiple review-state warnings are valid, but the acceptance layer is slightly too dense for a clean product flow. Some of the stronger status messages belong in dashboard/support states, not at the main onboarding layer.

B. Missing or unclear points

The final copy should distinguish more clearly between:

- public website / help-center copy,
- customer complaint-submission copy,
- affiliate onboarding copy,
- and affiliate dashboard/status messages.

Right now all four are present, but not yet separated cleanly enough for production.

The customer-facing layer should also avoid sounding like it is promising a detailed case outcome. The underlying SOP supports controlled communications and limited disclosure of internal findings, so the public layer should stay with “reviewed and handled” rather than implying that detailed internal actions will be shared.

The optional complaint-submission checkbox is usable, but it should remain optional and should not become a blocker for complaint reporting.

POOOL handles affiliate-related complaints and review cases through a controlled process designed to protect users, payouts, and program integrity.

FAQ

How does POOOL handle affiliate-related complaints?

POOOL handles affiliate-related complaints through a structured review process. Reports are logged, assessed, and reviewed using controlled case-handling steps.

What happens after I submit a complaint or report?

Your report is recorded and reviewed by the relevant team. Where needed, POOOL may request more information, preserve evidence, or apply temporary restrictions while the matter is under review.

Can POOOL restrict activity while a case is under review?

Yes. Where needed to protect customers, payout integrity, or program integrity, POOOL may temporarily restrict referral tools, qualification status, or payouts while a review is ongoing.

Will I be told the outcome?

POOOL may confirm that a report was reviewed and handled. For privacy, security, and internal control reasons, POOOL may not share all internal findings or actions in detail.

Why can an affiliate payout be on hold during a review?

A payout may be placed on hold if there is an open complaint, qualification issue, fraud concern, reversal issue, or another case that affects payout integrity.

What happens if an affiliate does not cooperate in a review?

Failure to cooperate may affect how the case is handled under the affiliate program rules and may lead to restrictions, suspension, payout impact, or further action.

Can I send more evidence after filing a complaint?

Yes. If you have additional screenshots, links, messages, or other supporting details, you should send them through the approved support or case channel.

Affiliate onboarding

Screen 1 — Complaints and reviews

Affiliate-related complaints, review cases, and serious program concerns are handled through a structured internal process.

Screen 2 — Cooperation during review

You may be asked to cooperate, provide information, or respond to a review request.

Screen 3 — Temporary restrictions

If a complaint, qualification issue, fraud concern, or payout-risk issue is under review, POOOL may temporarily restrict referral tools, qualification status, or payouts while the case is assessed.

Screen 4 — Evidence and records

POOOL may preserve relevant content, referral records, payout records, and related evidence as part of a complaint or investigation process.

Screen 5 — Possible outcomes

Depending on the case, outcomes may include no action, correction, warning, freeze, suspension, payout impact, removal, or internal process remediation.

Short website version

POOOL handles affiliate-related complaints and review cases through a structured process. Reports are logged, evidence may be preserved, temporary protections may be applied where needed, and outcomes are documented before cases are closed.

D. Final legal-review flags only

1. Whether public-facing copy should say “structured review process” instead of “formal internal process” everywhere.
2. Whether the optional complaint-submission checkbox should stay visible in production.
3. Whether affiliate onboarding should mention all possible outcomes, or whether stronger outcomes such as removal should sit only in dashboard/support contexts.
4. Whether some review-state messages should include a response deadline in affiliate-facing product flows.

E. Readiness note for website, onboarding, and product implementation

This is ready for website, onboarding, support, and dashboard implementation review. The substance is already correct and well aligned with the underlying SOP. The main improvement was tightening the tone, reducing unnecessary exposure of internal mechanics, and separating the public/product-facing layer from the broader internal working pack.
