

A. Issues found

The draft is materially aligned with the approved baseline and the approved Qualified Referral & Payout Policy. It correctly preserves the core payout logic: a referral is not payable just because someone clicked, registered, or started onboarding; qualification depends on valid attribution, completed KYC, a first eligible paid investment, holdback/review clearance, no disqualifying issue, and final payout/tax readiness. It also correctly keeps the anti-abuse logic for self-referrals, referral rings, fraud, reversal, and dispute review.

The main weakness is surface mixing. The file is still a working pack, not a clean final website layer. It includes homepage options, FAQ, onboarding, checkboxes, tooltips, warnings, a full content map, short customer-facing summary, backend notes, legal-review items, and recommendation notes in one output. For production, the public/product layer should stop before internal content maps and backend logic.

A second issue is over-explaining internal mechanics in public copy. The line about the “approved draft uses a recommended launch default of 30 days... subject to later confirmation” is accurate internally, but it sounds too legalistic and provisional for a premium website/help-center layer. Public copy should explain the holdback simply, while final numeric wording can sit in onboarding/help text only if POOOL is comfortable publishing it.

A third issue is checkbox heaviness. The four checkboxes are directionally correct, but for UX they are slightly repetitive. The longest checkbox should stay in onboarding/dashboard acceptance, while the rest should be tightened for product usability.

B. Missing or unclear points

The public layer should say a little more clearly that commission is paid only after the referral is approved for release, not just “qualified.” That distinction is already present in the draft and in the underlying policy and should remain visible.

The final copy should also distinguish more clearly between:

- public website copy,
- affiliate onboarding copy,
- dashboard status help,
- and support explanations.

Right now the content contains all four, but not yet in the cleanest final presentation.

The phrase “system-of-record data” should stay in support/review language, not customer-facing website language. The underlying policy needs that concept, but the website layer should describe it more simply as “POOOL’s review records” or “POOOL’s review process.”

C. Revised Website Copy Final

Homepage short copy Qualified referrals only.

POOOL pays affiliate commission only on referrals that are validly tracked, fully cleared, and approved for payout.

FAQ

What is a Qualified Referral?

A Qualified Referral is a referred user who is validly attributed, completes required onboarding and KYC, completes a first eligible paid investment, clears the review period, has no disqualifying issue, and passes final payout checks.

Is a referral paid as soon as someone clicks my link?

No. A click, signup, registration, incomplete KYC, or an initiated transaction does not by itself create a payable commission.

When does commission become payable?

Commission becomes payable only after the referral is qualified, the review period has cleared, no unresolved issue exists, your payout and tax setup is complete, and the payout is approved for release.

Why can a payout be on hold?

A payout may be held or frozen if attribution is disputed, KYC is incomplete, review is still running, fraud or reversal review is open, self-referral or referral-ring activity is suspected, or payout/tax data is incomplete.

What is the review period?

A referral remains provisional for a review period after the first eligible paid investment before payout can move forward.

Can a paid commission be reversed later?

Yes. If the qualifying event is later reversed or invalidated, or if fraud, self-referral, referral-ring activity, policy breach, or another disqualifying event is found, POOOL may deny, freeze, reverse, offset, or claw back the affected commission.

Can affiliates refer themselves?

No. Self-referral is prohibited and can lead to disqualification of the referral, removal of commission and tier credit, and further enforcement action.

What happens if there is a dispute about a referral or payout?

The affiliate must raise the dispute through POOOL's approved review process. POOOL may request additional evidence and may pause payout while the matter is reviewed.

Onboarding flow

Screen 1 — How affiliate payouts work

Your commission is paid only on Qualified Referrals that pass POOOL's review and payout controls.

Screen 2 — What counts as a Qualified Referral

A referral must be validly attributed, complete KYC, complete a first eligible paid investment, clear review, and remain free of disqualifying issues before it can move toward payout.

Screen 3 — Tracked vs qualified vs payable

A tracked referral is not yet qualified. A qualified referral is not yet payable. Payout happens only after all final checks are complete.

Screen 4 — Why payouts may be delayed

POOOL may hold or freeze referrals, commissions, or payouts while attribution, compliance, fraud, reversal, or payout/tax checks are still open.

Screen 5 — Important program restrictions

Self-referrals, referral rings, policy-breach referrals, and manipulated or fraudulent referrals do not qualify for payout and may lead to further action.

Screen 6 — Final payout logic

Your payout remains provisional until qualification, review, finance review, and payout/tax readiness are complete.

Checkbox text

- I understand that commission becomes payable only for Qualified Referrals and only after valid attribution, KYC, first eligible paid investment, review clearance, and payout/tax readiness are complete.

- I understand that tracked referrals, qualified referrals, and payable commissions are different stages.
- I understand that self-referrals, referral rings, fraudulent referrals, and referrals generated through prohibited conduct do not qualify for payout.
- I understand that POOOL may hold, freeze, deny, reverse, offset, or claw back commission where the program rules are not met.

Tooltip text

- Qualified Referral — A referral becomes qualified only after all required conditions are met.
- Pending — Referral tracked, but not yet qualified.
- Under Review — Qualification, review, fraud, compliance, or payout checks are still running.
- Qualified — Referral cleared under the qualification rules.
- Payable — Approved for release in the payout cycle.
- Frozen — Temporarily blocked pending review.
- Disqualified / Reversed — Not eligible for payout.
- Review period — A control period after the first eligible paid investment before payout can move forward.

- Payout unavailable: a disqualifying event applies to this referral.
- This payout may be affected by fraud, reversal, or compliance review.

Short website version

A referral is not paid just because someone clicked your link or signed up.

Commission becomes payable only when the referral is validly tracked, the user completes KYC and a first eligible paid investment, the review period is cleared, no disqualifying issue exists, and payout is approved for release.

D. Final legal-review flags only

1. Final public wording for the review / holdback period, including whether the 30-day default should appear in public copy.
2. Final public wording for any minimum-investment threshold, if one is adopted later.
3. Final public wording for payout-cycle timing and release schedule.
4. Final public wording for post-payment reversal, offset, and clawback language in affiliate-facing product copy.

E. Readiness note for website, onboarding, and product implementation

This is ready for website, onboarding, dashboard, and support implementation review. The substance is already strong and consistent with the approved payout-policy logic. The main improvement was cleaning it into a tighter public/product layer by removing internal-pack behavior, simplifying overly legalistic wording, and preserving the key operational distinction between tracked, qualified, and payable.
